

These days, LCCI's strong suit is the flexibility it provides by "unitising" its qualifications. Students are able to customise their programmes by opting for "bite-sized" qualifications that they can mix and match. Naturally, this is a very attractive proposition for working individuals.

The other key feature is LCCI's on-demand delivery so students don't have to wait until fixed dates each year in order to sit for their examinations and obtain their certificates.

Previously, exams were held only three times a year but now students get to enjoy flexibility while achieving their qualifications more quickly.

This year, the company launched a new suite of updated marketing qualifications. And in September, new accounting diplomas will be introduced, including a computerised accounting exam and modules like Ethics in Accounting and English in Accounting. Revised secretarial qualifications will also be unveiled later this year.
